

TODD MABRATEN

CEO ORANGEGRID

Todd Mabraten is OrangeGrid's Chief Executive Officer and Co-Founder. Mabraten is the visionary behind the company's strategic initiatives and brings more than 20 years' experience as an entrepreneur, business operator, and technology provider. His vision behind OrangeGrid was to deliver a solution to business professionals that would allow them to do more with less, in ever-changing environments. Mabraten believes his success is only as good as the people he surrounds himself with and no single person becomes successful on their own. Mabraten took his first leap at entrepreneurship at the early age of 19 and took his company global by the time he was 21. Throughout his career, Mabraten has served as a source and a thought leader to the Mortgage Banking and Real Estate Industries and spent 15 years as President and COO for a leading and cutting edge technology company, RES.NET, and its parent company USRES, Inc.. Mabraten is no stranger to the media, contributing to more than 100 articles in 30 distinct publications. He had the distinct honor of interviewing President Bill Clinton at the 2012 National Five Star Event, during a presentation for more than 4,000 mortgage industry professionals and has hosted luncheon meetings for former First Lady Laura Bush and Steve Forbes in 2009 and 2010. Mabraten was named one of the top 20 industry leaders in 2012 by DSNews.
